The Microsoft settlement is simply not the proper remedy for a company that has done nothing less than bully the computer industry over the past 20 years. They have caused much harm to the consume by squelching software innovation and choice when it comes to Operating systems, web browsers, application software, and Java. Simply put, Microsoft needs to follow standards, leave OEM's alone, bundle Opera browser on Windows as well as Internet Explorer and let the user choose the best.

Thanks for listening.
